

Final Pitch Peer Review

---

- Neel Joshi

VC available = $1M

My strategy will be to invest 75% of the VC into startups which have a higher rate of return compared to the other startups. The remaining 25% can be invested in long-shot ideas which may or may not produce sizable returns immediately, but are innovative and may strike a fortune in future.

I would invest $400k in the pan-with-temperature-display startup, $200k in either of the electronics related startups, $150k in the gym related startup, $250 in the any of the rest of the startups because all are really great ideas.